STRENGTHENING FAMILIES. ENDING INSTITUTIONAL CARE.

LATVIA

COUNTRY FACT SHEET

There are still 1429 children living in institutional care facilities in Latvia. NGOs working in the field witness that there is a lack of quality family and community-based services to support children without or at risk of losing parental care. 2015 marked an important year to reform the child protection system in Latvia, as key documents, such as a Cabinet Regulation on the Implementation of De-institutionalisation (DI) and an Action Plan on DI were adopted. It is key that the government allocates sufficient funding to support the implementation of these policy documents and ensures that funding is spent according to local needs and in line with the UN Guidelines for the Alternative Care of Children.

Poverty and a lack of quality social services to prevent family breakdown are still compounding factors to place children in alternative care in Latvia. Municipalities are currently responsible for the development and provision of services to prevent family separation. Due to disparities in human resources and financial capacity between the 119 local municipalities, the availability, quality and diversity of social services and family support measures differ greatly from municipality to municipality. Particularly in rural areas, there is a lack of specialised social workers who can respond to the individual needs of children and families at risk of breakdown.

The Latvian government has taken important steps to improve and professionalize the foster care system. In June 2015, the Cabinet of Ministers adopted a Regulation on Foster Care (Regulation number 1036). This regulation introduces mandatory training programmes for foster families. Furthermore, the Ministry of Welfare has committed to work in 2017 on the concept, regulative basis and funding of specialised foster families. A key concern is that support services to help foster carers to respond to the specific needs of children still have to be put in place.

We welcome that the Latvian government has undertaken efforts to make the policy framework to support DI processes for children in Latvia more robust. We also acknowledge the importance of the allocation of funding of the EU, the State Budget and other institutional donors (such as OAK foundation) to support the implementation of these plans and regulations. However, efforts to make changes on the ground have been delayed significantly. Attention should now shift from the development of plans and communication strategies to the actual development of quality care and community-based services. Furthermore, a long term perspective on planning, developing and financing new services should be in place to secure the sustainability of these new services.
