Over 17,000 participants from over 140 countries have learnt how to offer the best possible alternative care, protection and support to the thousands of unaccompanied and separated children on the move.

Equip yourself for 2020 by joining thousands more for the third run of an innovative free training course produced by CELCLIS, at the University of Strathclyde with strategic advice and review of course content by Harvard FXB Center for Health and Human Rights at Harvard University as well as a number of advisors and contributors.

Backed by 16 leading international humanitarian and children's rights organisations, the course is informed by the expertise and experience of young people, professionals, volunteers, and academics.

This new, free, six week online course is now available to anyone with a responsibility for responding to the care and protection needs of unaccompanied and separated children and young people.

Learners will be able to share ideas and examples of practice with other learners across the world. Front line professionals and volunteers including humanitarian workers, social workers, teachers, border staff and migration officers, lawyers and medical workers, sign up today!

Available in English, Spanish, French and Arabic.
