Glossary of Terms

Assessment: The process of identifying the specific needs, strengths, and resources of a child and family. An assessment explores a person’s socioeconomic status, health status, nutrition, psychosocial wellbeing, emotional status, and education. Each child, as well as the conditions affecting the family, should be evaluated individually. The assessment is conducted by social work and psychology practitioners, who will document and provide evidence that the child and the family are candidates for reintegration, according to the child’s best interest.

Best interest of the child: Determining the best interest of the child requires a clear and thorough assessment of the child’s identity, especially their nationality, upbringing, ethnic, cultural, and linguistic background, as well as their vulnerabilities and special protection needs. The concept of the child’s best interest is flexible and adaptable. It must be determined and adapted to each child’s specific and individual needs. The decisions about the child should also be made and assessed on a case-by-case basis.

Birth family: The child’s biological parents and siblings.

Care plan: It is the process of developing a written plan that outlines how to improve the child’s wellbeing and safety and increase the resilience of the child and the family to risks and vulnerabilities. It is based on the child’s best interest, the views of the child and the family, and other individuals who are close to the child and the family to support successful family reintegration. The Care Plan shall include goals and actions towards child reintegration into a family.

Case Analysis: Research and learning tool aimed at learning and understanding the characteristics of a specific situation found in case management, allowing practitioners (psychologists, social workers, educators, and lawyers) to inquire about the needs of a child and find answers and options to improve his/her situation. After an in-depth analysis of all factors, practitioners will select a solution based on the child’s best interests.

Case closure: It occurs after reunification and by providing systematic follow-up to the child in his/her family environment; when based on evidence, the caseworkers are confident that the child’s safety and wellbeing are secure. Case closure should only be considered when the objectives agreed in the most recent version of the Care Plan have been met – i.e., when there has been adequate progress against clear benchmarks and where relevant assessments provide evidence that the child is emotionally stable and integrated into the family and community.

2 UN Committee on the Rights of the Child (2013). General Comment No. 14 on the right of the child to have his or her best interests taken as a primary consideration (art. 3, para. 1).
3 Guatemala’s Supreme Court, Agreement 40-2010, “Reglamento para la Aplicación de Medidas de Protección a Niños Privados de su Medio Familiar por parte de juzgados que ejercen competencia en materia de Niñez y Adolescencia Amenazada o Violada en sus Derechos Humanos”, Art. 6.
Case follow-up: Regular home visits to the child and the family to ensure that the reintegration process serves the child’s best interest. Caseworkers review the Care Plan with the child and the family, identify needed psychosocial services and link them to service providers. These visits also serve to monitor a child’s progress in establishing an emotional connection and reintegrating him/her into the family and to identify challenges. Follow-up will be conducted for two consecutive years.

Case management process: It is the process of organizing, planning, and implementing the work in different stages for prevention, reintegration, and adoption of children deprived of parental care or who are at risk of separation. The first step is to identify a child or adolescent who is vulnerable or whose situation requires support or assistance. Case management involves a practitioner (on social work and psychology) or a team of practitioners assessing the needs of the case and organizing, coordinating, supervising, and defining a package of services to meet the needs of the specific case. It involves the participation of all the organizations working in the child protection system at each stage of the protection process.

Caseworkers: Social work and psychology professionals responsible for coordinating child reintegration process in the demonstration area, conducting assessments and case analysis, linking the child/family with necessary social services and conducting the training process towards reunification. They are also in charge of coordinating with orphanages and partner organizations working towards reunification, such as PGN, SBS and the OJ (Child & Youth Court).

Child (boy and girl) and adolescent or NNA: A child is any human being under 13 years. An adolescent is anyone between the ages of 13 to 17.

Child protection measures: Actions carried out by a competent judge to reinstate the rights of children whose rights have been violated. The application of the measures will take into account the needs of the affected person, prevailing those aimed at strengthening family and community ties, respecting personal and cultural identity.

The Law for the Comprehensive Protection of Children and Adolescents establishes two types of measures depending on the functions, purposes, and stage of the proceedings of the case in question. Precautionary protection measures and definitive protection measures. The purpose of the precautionary protection measures is to prevent further physical or moral damage to the child caused by a threat or violation of their rights. These must be issued immediately after learning about the event, and the best interest of the child victim must be a primary consideration at all times over any other interest. An example of a precautionary measure is the temporary placement in foster care. The definitive protection measures are determined by the competent Child and Youth Court and are intended to reinstate the right infringed and stop the threat of the violation or onslaught to which the child is being subjected. The judge applies a definitive measure to ensure that the event that led to the breach is not repeated. However, a thorough investigation of the specific case must be conducted, and all interested parties must be heard, especially the affected boy or girl and the state duty bearers responsible by law to intervene in this type of process. An example of a definitive measure is when the court declares a child’s adoptability.

Children’s views: Ensure that the opinion of the child is heard and taken into consideration by the authorities when making decisions and that the child is informed and advised about his/her rights. State parties should ensure the right of the child to be heard, “when the child can form his or her own views”. These terms should not be seen as a limitation but as an obligation to the state parties to assess the child’s ability to form his or her own opinion as much as possible. This means that state parties cannot act based on the assumption that a child is incapable of expressing his or her views. On the contrary, state parties shall assume that the child can form his or her views and recognize their right to express those views. It is not up to the child to prove that capacity before expressing it.

Child preparation for reunification and reintegration: It is the work conducted to prepare the child for reunification/reintegration with the birth or extended family or before placing them with a foster family. Preparation includes working with children’s physical, emotional, social, and relational aspects to prepare them before reunifying them with the family and community and conducting activities to disconnect them from the orphanage and link them with the family with whom they will be placed/reunited.

Extended family: It includes a person’s relatives outside the birth family, related by blood or affinity, or a person who maintains the equivalent of a family relationship with the child whose rights have been threatened or infringed based on national and community cultural practices and customs.

Family tracing: Planed investigation and search activities conducted by a professional social service worker or PGN investigator to locate the birth or the extended family of a child currently living in residential care. The existing family care option must meet the principle of suitability and comply with the relevant assessments to shelter and protect the child and provide evidence of their ability to build/rebuild the bonds or relationships with the child.

Family preparation for reunification and reintegration: Orientation provided to the birth or extended family that will receive a child/adolescent. Foster care families are also prepared before child placement. Caseworkers prepare families socially and emotionally and with actions to protect the child’s physical and emotional integrity and strengthen parenting capacities needed for reunification. They should also consider the child’s life cycle and development stages, always seeking a sustainable and healthy reintegration.

Identification: It is the first step of case management. It encompasses identifying children who will go through an assessment and eligibility process for reintegration. Identification is based on a specific profile. The child must comply with certain criteria that include age, the reason for entering the orphanage, and family situation.12

Orphanage: Per the United Nations Guidelines for the Alternative Care of Children, this term refers to “residential care” for children provided in any non-family-based group setting, such as safe places for emergency care, emergency transit centers, and other short and long-term residential care facilities, including orphanages.13 In Guatemala, it refers to public and private institutions whose main role is to provide child protection and shelter.14

Reintegration: The process of a separated child or adolescent making what is anticipated to be a permanent transition back to his or her family (usually of origin), to receive protection and care, and to find a sense of belonging and purpose in all spheres of life. It is the process that takes place after reunification, and it means that a stable emotional connection has been established between the child and the family and that a healthy and sustained reintegration has taken place.15

Reunification: The physical reuniting of a separated child and his or her family or previous caregiver. It only refers to the physical reunion, always seeking a permanent family for the child.16

United Nations Guidelines for the Alternative Care of Children: Desirable orientations for policy and practice to promote the implementation of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and of relevant provisions of other international instruments regarding the protection and wellbeing of children deprived of parental care or who are at risk of being so.17

Presentation

Changing The Way We Care (CTWWC) - Cambiando la Forma en Que Cuidamos is a global initiative designed to promote safe family care and prevent unnecessary child-family separation. It includes strengthening families and reforming national systems for the protection and care of children, including family reunification and reintegration, and the development of alternative family-based care (in line with the United Nations Guidelines for the Alternative Care of Children).\(^{18}\)

The CTWWC initiative is a consortium formed by Catholic Relief Services and Maestral International through a Global Development Alliance (GDA) and with the support of three donors (McArthur Foundation, USAID, and GHR Foundation). CTWWC is operating in a context of growing interest in care reform and as a result of a growing global understanding that institutional care of children is a significant problem that will be best addressed through collaboration between national, regional, and international stakeholders to develop alternative care systems supportive of family care.

CTWWC began demonstration interventions in Kenya and Guatemala and regional and global influence work in October 2018. In 2019, the CTWWC Board of Directors renovated its commitment to implement the initiative in seven demonstration countries. During implementation year two, interventions extended to Haiti and India based on SRI seed funding, a fundraising strategy that includes eventual intervention in Lebanon and Indonesia.

Changing the Way We Care has three main strategies: 1) Governments promote family care through the improvement and implementation of policies; workforce investment on social workers, therapists, and other social service staff; and national and community systems serving vulnerable children and families; (2) Children stay or return to families through various family strengthening interventions that consider the child’s opinion, the engagement of the local community, and the transition of orphanages into family care initiatives; and 3) Family care is promoted globally through global, regional and national advocacy to advance policies, best practices and the redirection of resources by multi-lateral, bilateral, corporate, philanthropic, faith-based and secular organizations and individuals, increasing the interest of other countries to support family-based care. The global effort will use learning and evidence from CTWWC demonstration countries and other countries going through similar reforms to influence policies and practices that lead to redirection of funding to support family care over institutions.

Based on its objectives, principles, and strategic direction and within the collaboration agreement signed with Guatemala’s Attorney General (PGN), CTWWC initiated discussions with the Office of the Child and Youth Advocate (PNA) to analyze the implementation of a roadmap to prevent unnecessary child-family separation in the department of Guatemala. This roadmap aims to contribute to PNA’s institutional efforts of helping families reinstate children's rights by solving the issues administratively.

Many of the reports of child rights transgressions by parents and caregivers received by PGN are cases that can be solved by referring children and families to social services or family strengthening support.

As a result, CTWWC scheduled meetings with PGN’s Child and Youth Advocate to discuss and analyze implementing interventions to help children stay with their families as long as the child isn’t in imminent danger. The Child and Youth Advocate agreed that predominant weight should be given to the child's best interest and support families to prevent unnecessary separation.

After conducting several meetings to discuss the need to establish coordination mechanisms to prevent unnecessary child-family separation, PGN agreed to use a prevention roadmap where the PGN would play a leading role as a duty bearer in safeguarding children's rights in Guatemala.

Implementing the roadmap and inter-institutional coordination to prevent unnecessary separation resulted in direct support to 18 families and 66 children and adolescents, prioritizing the child’s permanence in their family environment.
Acknowledgments

We want to thank the 18 families that participated in the process to prevent unnecessary child-family separation for allowing us to learn about their family dynamics. We at CTWWC value parents’ willingness to make changes in their parenting patterns and take action to ensure the rights of their children are respected. Special thanks to 66 children and adolescents who entrusted PGN-CTWWC to reinstate and ensure their rights.

CTWWC would also like to thank PGN’s Office of the Child and Youth Advocate for the trust bestowed upon CTWWC and their hard teamwork. A special thanks go to their inter-institutional psychosocial teams for their sensitivity and commitment to the case management process towards children’s wellbeing and protecting their rights.
Introduction

From April to September 2022, CTWWC and PGN implemented a process to prevent unnecessary child-family separation and provide accompaniment using the case management methodology and reintegration criteria with 18 families to promote children’s permanence within their current family environment.

The first step was identifying children vulnerable to rights violation or at risk of unnecessary family separation. For these cases, the PNA/PGN had already determined the possibility to reinstate their rights through an administrative process and all of the families resided in the municipalities of the department of Guatemala.

The PNA and PGN psychosocial teams from the department of Guatemala referred the cases to CTWWC staff by submitting a detailed case report in a form designed by PGN and CTWWC. PGN and CTWWC caseworkers later validated the information in a case-analysis meeting. They analyzed the support options and the start date for CTWWC/PGN accompaniment and follow-up to the PNA/PGN Protection Plan. This included home visits to 18 families, referral to social services, and family strengthening through economic and psychosocial support.

CTWWC psychosocial team registered the observations and discussion about the wellbeing of the child and the family based on the six wellbeing domains of the reintegration model promoted by CTWWC. All this facilitated the implementation of the Protection Plan and helped caseworkers provide orientation to families during the home visits. Caseworkers documented the progress of the activities implemented in a follow-up report, which they later submitted to the PNA/PGN caseworkers every month. The information presented in this report was enriched by the revision of the detailed reports issued by PGN and the data obtained from case review meetings held with PNA/PGN psychosocial teams.

This report includes the key lessons learned and the achievements resulting from CTWWC/PGN follow-up and family and economic strengthening activities provided to 18 families, along with information about 66 children and adolescents who remained with their family and community environment. The project also raised families’ awareness about the importance of providing children with safe and protective settings to foster their wellbeing through positive and loving parenting.
1. Description of the Process to Implement a Roadmap to Prevent Child-Family Separation

PGN's Office of the Child and Youth Advocate (PNA) constantly receives reports of suspected violations of children’s rights. PNA analyzes each complaint received and identifies the protection measure deemed necessary. There are some cases where the reason behind the child concern report does not require undertaking any legal child protection preceding, so family separation does not have to occur either. These cases are usually related to poverty conditions or lack of access to social services. PNA prioritizes the child’s best interest and the right to remain with their family through a Protection Plan, highly dependent on referral and linkages to social services for the children and their families. PNA's verification and inter-institutional coordination unit later validate the Protection Plan.

In January 2021, CTWWC and PGN/PNA began coordinating and discussing how to implement a roadmap to support families and prevent unnecessary child-family separation, particularly for cases requiring no legal proceedings. They agreed to resolve them administratively, always prioritizing the child's best interest.

The roadmap encompasses six stages where PNA plays a leading role as a duty bearer safeguarding children’s rights. During the meetings between PGN and CTWWC to design the roadmap, they analyzed the stages that required direct PNA participation and those where they could use the support of other organizations such as the CTWWC initiative.

The first three stages of the roadmap - identification, investigation, and protection plan is the sole responsibility of PNA to implement them. The fourth and fifth stages - referral of services and follow-up are to be conducted collaboratively by PNA and CTWWC. The last phase – case closure will be determined by PNA, using CTWWC reports and families’ progress in implementing the Protection Plan.

The plan was to implement the pilot roadmap with 18 families. PNA transferred each case to CTWWC by submitting a detailed report and a Protection Plan for each case. The process included case-analysis meetings to analyze the support needed to make referrals to social services and analyze the results of the joint home visits aimed at strengthening and accompanying families to prevent children's separation from their families.
2. Analyzing results of the cases related to stages 1, 2, and 3 of the Roadmap to Prevent Child-Family Separation

2.1 Reason for the child concern report

PNA’s detailed reports submitted to CTWWC helped caseworkers learn about the grounds for the child concern reports made to PGN involving the 18 families to be supported during the roadmap implementation.

Chart 1 shows the reasons for the child concern reports made to PGN, most of which were anonymous. Physical maltreatment, neglect, and parental alcohol abuse were the reasons most frequently reported. There were also less frequent reports of malnourished children, physical assault by non-relatives, the right to an identity, the mother’s abandonment, and sexual violence.

![Chart 1: Reasons for the child concern report](source: PNA/ PGN Caseworkers’ Case Detailed Reports, 2021)

2.2 Alleged violated rights based on the reports

Chart 2 presents the alleged rights being violated based on the reports made to PGN. The child’s right to health has been the most disregarded. This includes physical, emotional, and mental health. Many of the reports received relate to physical maltreatment, directly affecting children’s emotional and mental health.

Results also showed frequent infringement of the child’s right to integrity and education. The child’s right to protection, identity, safety, food, and the right to a family have also been infringed to a lesser extent.

![Chart 2: Alleged violated rights based on the report](source: PNA/ PGN Caseworkers’ Case Detailed Reports, 2021)
Unfortunately, there were frequent cases where three different rights were being violated in one single case.

2.3 Risks identified during verification visits made by PGN caseworkers.

PGN caseworkers made home visits to verify the reports received. Risks identified more frequently included parental neglect and negligent treatment, inadequate parenting patterns, parents’ low schooling level, unemployment, and children’s school dropout. Risks identified to a lesser extent included a type of domestic violence, the lack of housing, family disintegration, and malnutrition (a girl had a chronic disease).

All 18 were low-income families. Therefore, they all received CTWWC family and economic strengthening support and were referred to social services.

2.4 Cases resolved through an administrative process by PGN

Although the child concern reports made to PGN indicated suspicion of child rights transgressions, these did not constitute a cause for separation or legal action, so PGN and CTWWC resolved all cases (18) through administrative channels.

When PGN staff made the home visits to verify the reports, they did not identify violated rights. However, they identified risk factors that if not addressed in a timely fashion, could result in a violation of children’s rights.

CTWWC offered families different alternatives to access social services to address the risk factors identified so that children and adolescents could remain within their care.

During the roadmap to prevent family separation, CTWWC learned about a girl allegedly engaged in child labor which was reported to PGN anonymously. PGN required the case to be known by a Child and Youth Court, where the judge ruled against the girls’ separation from her family environment.
3. Analyzing the results related to stages 4 and 5 of the Roadmap to Prevent Child-Family Separation

3.1. Number of children and adolescents and their ages

Chart 5 shows the ages of the 66 children and adolescents (36 girls and 30 boys) who participated in the Roadmap to Prevent Unnecessary Child-Family Separation. Of these, 23 children (17 girls and 6 boys) fall into the early childhood group (from 0 to 6 years). 14 girls and 13 boys are from ages 7-12, and there are 5 teenage girls and 11 teenage boys. This means the majority of the children were in early childhood and childhood ages, critical years to be surrounded by a safe and nurturing family environment to help ensure their integral development.

3.2. Schooling level

Chart 7 shows the schooling level of the 66 boys and girls:

- 21 boys and girls are not attending school. 14 of these are not in school-age (ages 0-6).
- Four children were not enrolled in school. PGN-CTWWC helped families enroll one girl in school and is supporting three boys to register their birth at the RENAP National Registry. They currently receive classes as free listeners. Once they receive their birth certificate, they will be allowed to enroll in the school year 2022 formally.
- Three children and adolescents have a disability and were not enrolled in the regular education program. Based on PGN’s Protection Plan, CTWWC suggested parents take the necessary steps to enroll them in a special education program and provided them with household economic support. Follow-up visits revealed that families used the funds to pay for tuition in special education programs such as the Down Foundation.
- Preschool: 8 boys and girls (ages 5 and 6) are currently studying preschool.
- Primary level: 16 boys and girls are studying First and Second grade, including one girl with moderate cognitive disability who is in First Grade in the regular education program.
- Eleven boys and girls are currently in Third and Fourth grade and six boys and girls are in Fifth and Sixth grade.
- The CTWWC/PGN initiative advocated with the Pedro Poveda Foundation to provide educational materials to a child studying Second Grade.
- High school: Four teens are studying high school (one in 7th, two in 8th, and one in Ninth Grade.)

In general, Caseworkers identified a discrepancy between children’s school level and their current developmental levels and ages. Furthermore, some children, especially adolescents, did not have access to the internet to receive classes online. The economic support received from CTWWC allowed families to purchase internet cards and facilitate their access to their classes.

3.3. Children's health status

One six-year-old girl out of the 66 children has Lupus and is currently receiving treatment at the Unidad Nacional de Oncología Pediátrica (UNOP). Her family used CTWWC economic support exclusively to purchase food for her as she requires to follow a special diet, which has been challenging to maintain for her family.

![Chart 7: Is the child ill?](source: CTWWC Caseworkers’ Follow-up Reports, 2021)

3.4. Children’s disability status

Chart 8 shows that three girls and one teenage boy have a disability. When PGN heard about the cases, only one was studying, and the rest had never attended school or received any medical attention.

Three out of the four families claimed that they could not afford transportation costs to take their children to the specialized centers to receive the treatment they needed. The economic support received from CTWWC allowed two families to save funds and begin taking their children to the care facilities and receive specialized therapy for their disability.

![Chart 8: Does the child have a disability?](source: CTWWC Caseworkers’ Follow-up Reports, 2021)
Of the four children and adolescents with a disability, one girl has Down Syndrome, another one has microcephaly, and one girl and one teenage boy have a moderate cognitive disability. They all require specialized care and are currently under the supervision of their families.

4 Characteristics of the families

4.1. Type of family

The implementation of the Roadmap to Prevent Unnecessary Child-family Separation has supported 18 families. Of these, ten are two-parent families, seven are female-headed households, and one is a male-headed household. All children currently live with their birth or extended family, including their grandparents and aunts.

4.2. Parents’ health status:

All parents are in good health and currently do not suffer from any disease that requires specialized attention or treatment.
4.3. Parental disability:
Two families have a parent with a disability. The first family has a mother who is blind due to a car accident. She has not been able to get a job, meet her family's basic needs or provide proper care to her two children. The family discussed this situation and agreed that her boys would move in with their father and his new wife. In the second family, the father recently had a car accident which left him unable to move both legs. Both families live in precarious conditions since none have a monthly income to meet their children's basic needs. The support provided by CTWWC was crucial to helping both families who are raising two children each.

4.4. Household economic situation:
Parents' income, schooling level, and occupation indicate that 18 households have a limited economic situation. CTWWC supported all families by providing them with three prepaid cards with a total value of Q.1,500 to purchase food items. Throughout this process, caseworkers have witnessed that financial hardship can put children at risk of separation, especially when parents cannot afford basic needs or access to essential services, causing children's rights infringement unwittingly.

4.5 Housing:
Of the 18 families, five families own a house, seven do not own a house and are currently renting, and six families share their home with other relatives, but they pay the expenses separately.

Some of the families who rent a house have had conflicts with the neighbors, as they are the ones who reported them to the National Police and the PGN for concerns relating to their children. The families have considered moving but cannot afford a better place or find restrictions on the number of family members accepted in one household, which affects them because they have several children.

One of the families used the prepaid card to buy food and used the funds saved to buy a bed for the children. In general, these families live with an income below the minimum wage. Their belongings and essential furniture are scarce. Some families do not even have a dining table with chairs, let alone a place where children can do homework.

4.6. Location of the families

Although in the initial phases of institutional coordination, PGN-CTWWC agreed that they would support families living in Guatemala City and the municipalities of Villa Nueva and Mixco, given the need in other areas, the initiative was extended to all cases referred by PNA/PGN caseworkers, regardless of their location.

Chart 15 shows that most of the families supported so far live in Guatemala City and other municipalities within the department of Guatemala.

![Chart 15: Location of the families](source: CTWWC Caseworkers’ Follow-up Reports and PNA/PGN Detailed Reports, 2021)

5. Referral to social services based on the PGN Protection Plan

5.1 Referring children and adolescents to social services

Chart 16 shows the referrals made to social services. This includes 23 children and adolescents referred for psychological services, considering that emotional wellbeing was one of the risk factors and infringed rights most frequently found.
Caseworkers referred 20 children and adolescents to health services, including vaccination programs, weight monitoring, and medical examination and tests.

The chart shows that caseworkers referred 18 children to education services and psycho-educational support. They also identified that many school-age children had not started their studies yet or had dropped out of school. Caseworkers referred three teens to psychosexual orientation and three boys and girls with disabilities to rehabilitation, physiotherapy, and speech-language therapy.

Caseworkers identified that the birth of four children had not been registered at the RENAP National Registry. CTWWC coordinated with the Municipal Child and Youth Protection Office in the municipality of Villa Canales, which provided legal assistance to a family to register the births of three children at the RENAP office. Similarly, PGN provided orientation to another family to register a child’s birth at the RENAP office.

5.2 Referring mothers to social services

The majority of the children and adolescents are living with their mothers. Caseworkers identified that the main risk factors were related to inadequate parenting practices which have affected family dynamics leading to dysfunctional relationships. Based on this and following PGN’s Protection Plan, caseworkers referred seven families to parenting skills training and six families to psychological therapy.

Caseworkers referred three mothers to a health center to receive family planning counseling, two mothers to a social program that offered food aid, and one mother to RENAP to process a personal identification card (DPI).

Staff also referred one mother to visual rehabilitation therapy and another to legal assistance for delayed birth registration.

5.3 Referring fathers to social services

Caseworkers identified ten two-parent families and referred nine fathers from these families to social services, as shown in Chart 18. Four fathers were referred to psychological services and two to parenting skills training to improve their parenting patterns and strengthen assertive communication within the
Two couples were also referred to family planning counseling and one father to addiction treatment.

6. CTWWC household economic strengthening provided to families and follow-up to Protection Plan and referral of social services

Out of all the child concern reports received by PGN, caseworkers identified some cases that could be resolved through an administrative process. As a result, CTWWC provided household economic support to 18 families through prepaid cards, which could be redeemed for food items, benefiting 66 children and adolescents who remained with their families.

6.2 Home visits to follow up the Protection and Economic Strengthening Plan

From April to September 2021, caseworkers made 38 home visits to the 18 families referred by PGN to follow up on the social services they were referred to, the Protection Plan's implementation, and to distribute the prepaid cards to buy food. PGN and CTWWC caseworkers made 35 of the 38 visits together. These visits included three home visits to two families and two home visits to 16 families.

These visits served to identify progress in implementing the Care or Protection Plan and guide families about using the financial support they received. Caseworkers also encouraged them to start a small business and use prepaid cards to purchase essential items.

6.3 CTWWC actions to refer families to social services

- Coordination and follow-up with CONACMI to incorporate one family into their parenting training program and psychological support.
- Coordination and follow-up with Pedro Poveda Foundation to provide a group of siblings with educational materials and psycho-educational support.
- Coordination and follow-up with CASA JOVEN Palencia to incorporate one family into their parenting training program and psychological therapies.
- Coordination and follow-up with the Municipality of Villa Canales, which provided a family with legal assistance to register the births of three children at the RENAP National Registry. The mother never registered the births nor had a birth registry from the hospital where she gave birth to her children.
- Coordination and follow-up with Protejo Program to incorporate a family in their occupational workshops to help the mother develop new skills and start a small business.
- Coordination and follow-up with the Secretary of Social Welfare to include a family to receive family subsidies, although the support requested did not come through.
- Coordination and follow-up with the Villa Canales Municipal Services for Women to register one family to receive psychological therapies.

8. Lessons Learned

- The Roadmap to Prevent Unnecessary Child-Family Separation is the result of a concerted effort between Guatemala’s Attorney General and the Changing the Way We Care initiative to promote children’s permanency in their family and community environment by analyzing the specific situation and prioritizing the child’s best interest.
- The PGN-CTWWC process to prevent separation through household economic support, follow-up, and referral to social services with 18 families prevented unnecessary child-family separation. It contributed to keeping children within family protection settings.
- PGN and CTWWC team collaboration were positive and helpful to ensure that 66 children and adolescents remained in their family environment. This proves that assertive inter-institutional communication and access to the social services needed by the families can bring about significant changes to protect children’s rights in vulnerable situations, preventing separation from their families and their admission to residential care.
- Case-analysis meetings held by caseworkers are crucial to study and discuss the options and opportunities for families and children at risk of separation.
- The process to facilitate access to social services allowed CTWWC and PGN to identify several organizations that can contribute to the special protection of children. Inter-institutional coordination and social services mapping were valuable tools to facilitate families’ access to social services to support family strengthening and modifying non-assertive parenting patterns.
- Families remained motivated and willing to comply with PGN’s Protection Plan, and CTWWC family strengthening and economic support helped ease their financial distress. They were able to focus on developing skills to provide better and more loving care to their children to avoid the risk of being separated from them for putting their rights at risk.

9. Conclusions

- CTWWC accompaniment and family and economic strengthening supported 66 children and adolescents from 18 families at risk of separation due to alleged violation of children’s rights. After analyzing these allegations and weighing the child’s best interest, caseworkers resolved these cases through an administrative process and following PGN’s Protection Plan.
- Caseworkers referred 66 children and adolescents protected by administrative channels to social services and family strengthening activities given the underlying risk factors to avoid family separation and admission to residential care that would harm their integral development.
- CTWWC and PGN’s family strengthening support and follow up to the Protection Plan helped reinstate the rights to identity, education, health, and food of 66 children and, more importantly, their right to remain with their family.
- As a result of caseworkers’ accompaniment, 18 families started developing assertive tools to protect and care for their children. The economic support received helped them reduce their financial stress and meet essential needs such as buying food and hygiene items. They also saved funds to invest in their income generation activities, allowing parents to focus on improving child care practices and the relationship with their children.

- Inter-institutional coordination and prevention efforts that lead to the implementation of a roadmap to prevent unnecessary child-family separation stressed the importance of articulating interventions to prevent children’s separation from their family environment as long as their families can guarantee the protection of their rights.

- Accompaniment to 18 families provided evidence that poverty and economic pressure impact children’s healthy development due to the lack of access to essential health, housing, nutrition, and education, leading to violations of children’s fundamental rights.

10. Recommendations

For Guatemala’s Attorney General (PGN):

- Continue creating inter-institutional strategies with the organizations working in the child protection system, governmental and non-governmental organizations for more effective interventions and prevent children from exposure to risk situations that can limit their integral development.

- Continue accompanying families to prevent family separation and help children develop in a safe family environment with assertive parenting practices.

- Continue raising Guatemalan families’ awareness about the importance of respecting children’s rights as they are the most vulnerable population in the country. Many of the threats and violations of their fundamental rights occur for not knowing these rights.

- Welcome inter-institutional coordination opportunities with other programs to support children, especially those who live in poverty and lack access to basic services. All this is to prevent unnecessary child-family separation.

Caseworkers use this tool to identify children who are living in their home but who were referred to social services to prevent rights violation and promote their permanency with their current family environment. This information was obtained by reviewing PGN’s detailed report on the case and the data provided during the psychosocial teams’ case analysis and review meeting. It serves as a baseline to begin a family and economic strengthening support to prevent child-family separation as part of the CTWWC initiative.

Annex 3. Case-Analysis Meeting Report

PRESENTATION

As part of PGN and CTWWC's inter-institutional coordination to support the families identified by the PGN and prevent unnecessary child-family prevention and residential admission, CTWWC will provide economic strengthening support to the families that meet the criteria established in the verification report. Caseworkers conduct case-analysis meetings to analyze each case and agree on integral interventions to serve children and their families while fostering constant communication among PGN multidisciplinary teams.

The following is a proposed report format to facilitate documenting the team’s discussion during the case-analysis meetings and visualizing the goals and agreements reached by the multidisciplinary teams for each case.

Case-Analysis Meeting Report format

Heading

1. Date of the case-analysis meeting
2. Number of the current meeting
3. Suggested date for the next case-analysis meeting

Participants

Name and position of the participants and name of the organization.

Report of the cases analyzed

1. Case number
2. Name of the child or adolescent
3. Name of the current family caregiver
4. Summary of the reason why they learned about this case
5. Proposed PGN psychological team
6. Proposed CTWWC psychological team
7. Agreed goals
8. Dates of the intervention

Other matters discussed: Registering other matters addressed in the case-analysis meeting (even if it is unrelated to case analysis) is crucial for family strengthening activities such as referral to social services.

Overall Agreements: Register the agreements reached that are unrelated to the case analysis.
